FEAST OF THE HOLY FAMILY OF MARY, JOSEPH AND JESUS:

I have always appreciated a homily that Pope Paul VI gave on the occasion of this feast. He asked us to remember three points:

- the first aspect of the feast that struck the Holy Father was the silence. We know very, very little about Jesus before he was baptized at 30. We know the Blessed Virgin Mary "pondered" it all. After our Christmas celebrations, I can think of nothing better than a few moments of silence pondering the different ways we were struck by God's presence among us these last days.
- Our imagination sees this family as one of sharing and full of love. We know it was not always easy as the time of Jesus' being lost in the temple and his mild (maybe teen-age) confrontation of Mary and Joseph illustrate. But the deeper love brought them together in all circumstances, especially when he was on the Cross.
- "in Nazareth, the home of a craftsman's son, we learn about work and the discipline it entails." We can imagine Jesus working and learning beside St. Joseph. Pope Paul VI went on to talk about the dignity of all labor, especially the work of our hands.

May God bless your family today and throughout the New Year.
Father Kerry

Prayer to the Holy Family by Pope Francis

Jesus, Mary and Joseph, in you we contemplate the splendor of true love; to you we turn with trust.

Holy Family of Nazareth, grant that our families too may be places of communion and prayer, authentic schools of the Gospel and small domestic churches.

Holy Family of Nazareth, may families never again experience violence, rejection and division; may all who have been hurt or scandalized find ready comfort and healing.

Holy Family of Nazareth, make us once more mindful of the sacredness of inviolability of the family, and its beauty in God's plan.

Jesus, Mary and Joseph, Graciously hear our prayer. Amen.

SPECIAL BLESSINGS

The Dicastery for the Doctrine of the Faith's publication of the Declaration on the Pastoral Meaning of Blessings (Fiducia Supplicans) has triggered strong reactions worldwide. Critics on one side complained that the document has adopted a pastoral approach that disregards doctrine, has sowed confusion among the faithful, and has disrespected the synodal process. Those on the other side complained that it continued the practice of designating homosexual or divorced and remarried people as sinners, to the point of advocating that they be blessed as objects.

These types of statements demonstrate how difficult it is to enter into a calm dialogue with a well-constructed, well-argued text. I would like to start from these few criticisms, gleaned from among others, to show that the text stands up against them rather well, and that it therefore invites in-depth reading.

A need for tangible signs of God:

To begin with, it is useful to identify the pastoral issue underlying this document, even if it is never explicitly formulated: how can we honor the sacrament of marriage in all its grandeur, while ignoring the fact that so many couples living outside marriage need tangible signs that God has not abandoned them? Otherwise, they run the risk of leaving the Church, either loudly or quietly.

The Declaration does an honest job of tackling this question, which haunts many pastors and baptized lay people. It is both doctrinal and pastoral: Catholics need to be strengthened in their faith that God created marriage for their happiness and for that of humanity, and that God remains kind and merciful to those who take other paths for reasons they often do not fully understand.

Consistency between doctrine and pastoral practice:

The document also declares its desire to bring "together the doctrinal aspects with the pastoral ones in a coherent manner". How does it do this? To begin with, in the first part, it describes the specificity of marriage, based on the liturgy reserved for it, in which an ordained minister gives God's blessing to the couple, made up of a man and a woman, who have exchanged their consent. Lex orandi, lex credendi: the Church's prayer guides us to what we should believe. If the liturgy of the sacrament contains three successive blessings (twice on the couple and at the end on the whole assembly), it's because it is based on biblical faith.

This is why the Declaration then goes on, as does the Ritual of the Blessings, to recapture their meaning in Sacred Scripture. The starting point is God's goodness: God blesses widely, bestowing grace. Then the people respond by blessing God (ascending blessing). Finally, ministers are commissioned to bless in God's name (descending blessing). From this emerges a doctrine of blessing, which the Church's pastoral ministry has developed in various forms throughout history.

Avoiding confusion:

Following Vatican II, the Declaration introduces both a similarity and a difference between sacraments and sacramentals, of which blessings are a part. By virtue of this difference, confusion must be avoided between the blessings that are proper to the sacrament of marriage and those that are not. The Declaration is not doctrinal, but pastoral. Firstly, it affirms that the Church does not have the power to exclude certain categories of couples on principle: to do so would be to contradict the ascending and descending movement revealed in Scripture, based on the revelation of God's merciful love. Couples can therefore bless God and be blessed by God.

Secondly, it gives ordained ministers precise criteria to avoid confusion when blessing couples in irregular situations or same-sex couples: it must be far removed from any civil marriage, in time and dress; it should be part of a spiritual process of trust in God, with humility and lucidity, as, for example, during a pilgrimage; it should not use ritual, but demonstrate "spontaneity and freedom".

The dignity of the baptized:

This last point in the Declaration is the most stimulating, both for pastoral work and for the deepening of doctrine. It is drawn from the ecclesial experience of popular piety, which was the subject of a Roman Directory in 2002. Here we join the dynamics of a synodal Church: before blessing, the minister is urged to listen to what the couple expects from God through their desire for blessing. He can then invite them to bless God for the fruits of their union, and to ask for God's help in overcoming the limitations and lack of love in their lives.

From his heart as a priest or deacon, an appropriate prayer and gesture may "spontaneously" spring forth to bless this couple. Thanks to this discerning and personalized blessing, couples having a complicated history will be able to acknowledge before God, supported by an ordained minister of the Church, their dignity as baptized people and the value of their shared history, despite its objective limitations. They can then be re-launched in their life of faith.

Message From The Principal

WELL DONE!

Congratulations to our December teacher of the month, Mr. Testa! Colleagues shared that Mr. Testa is a caring person who builds good relationships with students and expects the very best of them. When asked if he could teach 7th and 8th grade science this school year, Mr. Testa was willing to take on this position in addition to his obligations to family and his construction business. He has been a blessing to have in the classroom as well as the leader of maintenance projects at the school. Thank you, Mr. Testa!

The middle school student of the month is 8th grader, Joshua Welter. Teachers say that Joshua has grown as a student by being more engaged in class and working to keep his grades up. Joshua has not only improved in the classroom but has been an integral part of the middle school boys' basketball team. Keep up the good work, Joshua!

Sophomore Charles Quinton has been chosen as the high school student of the month. Charles is a good example to other students by being involved in both academic and athletic events throughout the school year. Even though Charles is highly involved in activities, he does a nice job of keeping his grades up and puts in a great deal of effort into all that he does. Nice job Charles!
